Peabody, Mass., teacher cleaning up her classroom has discovered a Colonial-era document buried in a pile of outdated textbooks and dusty scraps of papers. Dated April 1792 and protected by plastic, it appears to document the payment of a debt by a Vermont man named Jonathan Bates. Peabody Historical Society President Bill Power verified the paper's authenticity. He says he was thrilled with the discovery. (AP)

President Threatens To Veto EPA Resolution

Washington

The White House on Tuesday upped the stakes on the Senate's first major climate change vote of the year, threatening to veto a Republican-led effort to stop the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency from carrying out regulations controlling greenhouse gases.

Murkowski

The White House, citing the environmental damage caused by the Gulf oil spill, said the measure to overturn new EPA regulations would increase U.S. dependence on oil and other fossil fuels and "block efforts to cut pollution that threatens our health and well-being."

With the veto threat, the "resolution of disapproval" offered by Sen. Lisa Murkowski, R-Alaska, has little chance of becoming law. But the outcome of the vote on Thursday is being seen by some as a key test as the Senate prepares to take up major climate change legislation later this summer. JIM ABRAMS (AP)

Defense: 'The Guy Ain't Corrupt'

Blagojevich's lawyer asserts ex-governor 'didn't take a dime'

Chicago

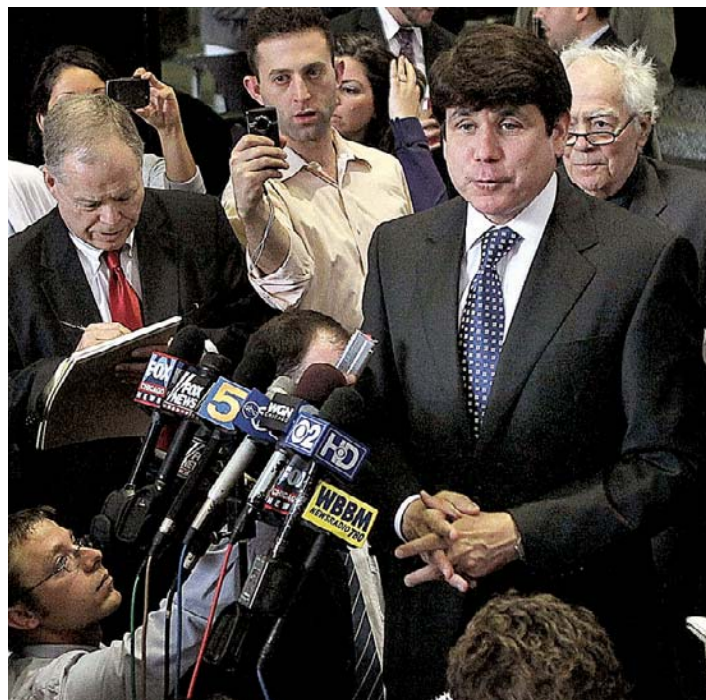

Rod Blagojevich is an honest man who "didn't take a dime" but had the bad judgment to trust the wrong people, the former Illinois governor's fiery attorney said Tuesday at Blagojevich's corruption trial.

Blagojevich will also take the stand on his own behalf, not just let a lawyer speak for him, defense attorney Sam Adam Jr. said in his opening statements.

"The guy ain't corrupt," Adam whispered, after slamming his hand down. He said the ousted governor's wife, Patti Blagojevich, will take the stand, too.

Adam said Blagojevich was fooled by those close to him.

Now-convicted influence peddler Antoin "Tony" Rezko helped raise money for lots of political candidates, including Blagojevich, Adam said. But he told jurors that "not a single penny" of ill-gotten money went into Blagojevich's campaign fund or his own pockets.

"You have to be comatose not to figure out how to get a dollar out of $52 billion," Adam said, referring to the state budget. "But who didn't? Him!" he said, indicating his client.

Blagojevich has pleaded not guilty to trying to sell or trade President Obama's former Senate seat. He also denies that he plotted to turn his power as governor into a moneymaking scheme for himself and insiders.

Tweet-Free Zone

Rod Blagojevich's effort to sway public opinion to his side won't involve Twitter — at least not while he's in court. Judge James Zagel on Tuesday banned the former governor from tweeting in the courtroom during his corruption trial. Blagojevich will still be permitted to speak with the media.

A federal prosecutor told jurors earlier that Blagojevich sought to use his power as governor to get benefits for himself and his inner circle through "a series of illegal shakedowns." And when Obama was elected — meaning the governor could appoint his successor to the Senate — Blagojevich's "golden ticket arrived," prosecutor Carrie E. Hamilton said. (AP)

RECALLS

General Motors Co. said Tuesday it is recalling about 1.5 million vehicles worldwide to address a problem with a heated windshield wiper fluid system that could lead to a fire, its second recall over the issue in two years. The recall affects several pickup trucks, sport utility vehicles, crossovers and passenger car models from 2006 to 2009. GM said it would disable the heated washer fluid system module that could lead to fires. (AP)

Killer to Face Utah Firing Squad

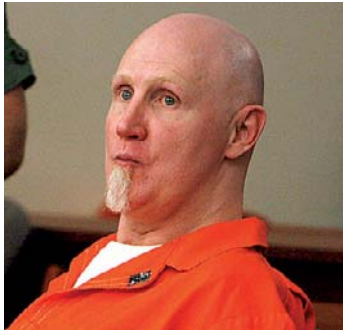

Convict chose the execution method over lethal injection

Salt Lake City

Barring a last-minute reprieve, Ronnie Lee Gardner will be strapped into a chair, a hood will be placed over his head, and a small white target will be pinned over his heart.

The order will come: “Ready, aim ...”

The 49-year-old convicted killer will be executed by a team of five anonymous marksmen firing with .30-caliber rifles. He is to be the third person executed by firing squad in Utah — or anywhere else in the U.S. — since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

Utah was a long holdout in keeping the method, which it has used in 40 of its 49 executions in the last 160 years. Utah lawmakers made lethal injection the default method of execution in 2004, but inmates condemned before then can still choose the firing squad.

That’s what Gardner did in April, politely telling a judge, “I would like the firing squad, please.”

Gardner, who is to be executed June 18, was convicted of murder 25 years ago for the fatal courthouse shooting of attorney Michael Burdell during an escape attempt.

Utah last used the firing squad in 1996. It is the only state that allows execution by firing squad, though Oklahoma law calls for that method if both lethal injection and electrocution are deemed unconstitutional. JENNIFER DOBNER (AP)

Battle Over Health Care Reform Rages On

President tries to sell seniors on law ahead of midterm elections

Washington

Remember health care?

President Obama has spent most of the past five weeks dealing with the oil spill disaster in the Gulf, financial regulation reform and still-simmering concern about the fate of the economic recovery.

But the White House is determined to take note of the more popular outcomes of its health care overhaul, in part to remind voters — as midterm elections approach — of the reasons the president pushed so hard to pass it.

President Obama shakes hands after a town hall meeting in Wheaton, Md., Tuesday.

On Tuesday, Obama hosted a televised town hall meeting with seniors aimed at highlighting the $250 rebate check they will receive to lessen the impact of the “doughnut hole” that affects so many of them.

For the president, the public relations event is an effort to move past the year of hearings, speeches and protests. But on Capitol Hill, the two parties are still arguing about health care.

“House Republicans will not rest until we repeal Obamacare lock, stock and barrel,” said Rep. Mike Pence of Indiana.

Democrats in Congress don’t see the health care debate as over, either. They have brought in White House officials to brief members on how to explain the law to voters in an effort to boost its popularity. PERRY BACON JR. AND MICHAEL D. SHEAR (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Police: Van der Sloot Confesses

Suspect in Ala. teen's disappearance says he killed Peruvian

Lima, Peru

Dutchman Joran van der Sloot, long the prime suspect in the 2005 disappearance of an Alabama teen in Aruba, has confessed to killing a Peruvian woman in his Lima hotel room, a police spokesman said.

Peru's chief police spokesman, Col. Abel Gamarra, told The Associated Press that Van der Sloot admitted under questioning Monday that he killed 21-year-old Stephany Flores on May 30.

Several Peruvian media outlets reported Van der Sloot killed Flores

The newspaper La Republica said that he tearfully confessed, in the presence of a prosecutor and a state-appointed attorney, to grabbing Flores by the neck and hitting her because she had viewed photos and videos about the Aruba case on his computer while he was out buying coffee.

When asked about the Van der Sloot confession, a brother of the victim's, Enrique Flores, said, "We are not going to make any comment. This is in the hands of the police, of the justice system."

Van der Sloot's confession came on his third full day in Peruvian police custody, on the eve of a planned trip to the hotel in which he was to participate in a reconstruction of the events leading to Flores' slaying, Gamarra said.

Flores, a business student, was found beaten to death, her neck broken, in the 22-year-old Dutchman's hotel room. FRANKLIN BRICENO (AP)

Clinton: New Iran Sanctions Toughest Ever

Quito, Ecuador

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Tuesday called the proposed new U.N. sanctions against Iran's suspect nuclear program the toughest ever adopted, a day before the U.N. Security Council was expected to vote on the measure.

Clinton told reporters in Ecuador's capital that there is strong support for a fourth resolution penalizing Iran for its refusal to prove its nuclear program is peaceful and defying international demands to halt uranium enrichment.

She declined to predict the outcome of the vote in the 15-member Security Council, but Defense Secretary Robert Gates, in London, said the measure would pass and pave the way for additional measures by the U.S. and its allies. (AP)

Chaos, Anxiety Along Gaza-Egypt Border

Rafah, Gaza Strip

A Palestinian who had to delay graduate school in Malaysia and an elderly man forced to put off eye surgery in Egypt are among thousands anxiously trying to get out of Gaza now that the blockaded territory's gateway to the world has opened just a little.

A Hamas-run passenger terminal on the Gaza side of the border was packed on Tuesday with hundreds of Gazans trying to get clearance just to approach the crossing into Egypt. It was a chaotic scene.

Many of Gaza's 1.5 million people have been forced to put their lives on hold during the three years the territory's borders were sealed by Israel and Egypt, following the violent takeover by Hamas.

Now, following last week's deadly Israeli raid on a blockade-busting flotilla, there is a glimmer of hope the darkest days may be over. In the wake of the assault that killed nine pro-Palestinian activists, world leaders have demanded the embargo be lifted or loosened.

Egypt's promise to keep the Rafah crossing open every day marks the first tangible improvement.

But only those with foreign passports or residency, people requiring medical treatment or people accepted at foreign universities are eligible to cross into Egypt. It's the same restricted group as in the past. KARIN LAUB (AP)

STYLE

A racy black gown worn by Lady Diana Spencer on one of her first official engagements has been snapped up by Chile's fashion museum, Museo de la Moda, for about $276,500. The strapless silk taffeta dress's revealing cut and striking color caused a minor scandal when Diana was pictured in the outfit at a London charity event in 1981. But the dress designed by Elizabeth Emanuel and her then-husband, David, helped turn Diana into a fashion icon. (AP)

Belgian War of Words Heats Up

Candidate campaigns for division between French, Dutch regions

Ghent, Belgium

The front-runner in Belgium's elections this weekend is running on perhaps the ultimate in divisive proposals: the breakup of the nation.

Despite its status as the home of the European Union, Belgium itself struggles with divisions between its 6 million Dutch-speakers and 4.5 million Francophones, but until recently, talk of a breakup has been limited to extremists.

Now, Bart De Wever of the centrist New Flemish Alliance is pressing for exactly that. What once seemed a preposterous fantasy of the political fringes has, in the mouth of a man seen as a possible prime minister, suddenly taken on an air of plausibility.

A boy rides a bike past a French sign that was defaced in a Flemish town in Belgium.

"We are in each other's face," De Wever told 800 party faithful. "And together, we are going downhill fast."

The prospect of a split raises many questions: What would happen to the European common currency if one of its founding members fell apart? Would prosperous Flanders be allowed to join but poorer Wallonia be kept out? Or would both inherit Belgium's right to the currency?

With his curtains-for-Belgium campaign, De Wever is forecast to

Continental Rifts

Belgium is not the only European nation that has yearned for an internal division. In Spain, Catalonia has long engaged in a campaign for independence, and Basque separatists still set off bombs in their quest for autonomy. Italy's Northern League, which is in coalition with Silvio Berlusconi's center-right party, has also advocated a split between the rich north and the poor south. (AP) win 26 percent of the vote — up from 3.2 percent in 2007. That means his party will likely emerge with the right to try to cobble together a coalition government.

Speaking Tuesday, De Wever described Belgium as a country at a standstill: "Belgium has become the sum of two different democracies [growing apart] with ever-increasing speed." ROBERT WIELAARD (AP)

China: N. Korean Guard Fatally Shot Three Chinese Near Border

Beijing

China said Tuesday that a North Korean border guard fatally shot three people and wounded a fourth on the countries' border last week, prompting a formal complaint from Beijing.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Qin Gang said a North Korean border guard last Friday shot four Chinese residents from the northeastern town of Dandong, apparently on suspicion that they were crossing the border for illegal trade.

"On the morning of June 4, some residents of Dandong, in Liaoning province, were shot by a DPRK border guard on suspicion of crossing the border for trade activities," he said at a regularly scheduled news conference. He used the acronym for North Korea's formal name, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

"China attaches great importance to that and has immediately raised a solemn representation with the DPRK. Now the case is under investigation," Qin said.

North Korea has not acknowledged the shootings. (AP)

Metro Plans Crash Memorial, Fails to Tell Victims' Families

Washington

Families of those killed in the Red Line train crash a year ago voiced surprise and exasperation on Tuesday that Metro has not informed them about a memorial event it planned for the victims as the June 22 anniversary approaches.

"All of us are angry and disappointed," said Kenneth Hawkins, whose brother, Dennis, died in the collision that left nine dead and 80 injured. "I would have thought the interim general manager would have stepped up to the plate and embraced the families."

Hawkins and other family members learned of a Metro remembrance service at the Fort Totten station planned for June 22 only when told about it by a reporter. Metro officials said the families would be invited but that planning was still under way.

"We definitely will be extending an invitation," said Metro spokeswoman Lisa Farbstein. "We are still firming that up," said Farbstein, saying a "logistics meeting" on the event was planned for later Tuesday. "When the plans are in place, the very first people we will invite will be family," she said.

Vintage aircraft flips on landing after flight to promote 3-D movie

Arlington

The main runway at Reagan National Airport reopened Tuesday afternoon after a vintage aircraft flipped when it landed.

Film producer Pietro Serapiglia says the aircraft was part of a group of vintage biplanes flying Tuesday morning to promote the opening of the 3-D film "Legends of Flight."

Serapiglia says the plane landed but then flipped over.

The Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority says no commercial planes were involved. The main runway was closed for about an hour and a half but reopened in the afternoon. Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Arlene Salac says flight inspectors will investigate.

FAA records show the 1942 Stearman plane, which was used for training pilots in World War II, is registered to Michael Truschel, of Nokesville, Va. The plane last flew on Sunday during a local air show.

The Washington Post reports that the newspaper's transportation writer was the passenger and that neither he nor the pilot was injured.

The National Safety Transportation Board is investigating the incident. (AP)

BP's Cap-Sized Mistake?

The company's decision to cut a leaking pipe may have only worsened the spill

Atlanta

Once constricted by the crumpled riser pipe, the full flow of the runaway wellhead in the BP oil spill burst forth last week when BP sawed through the pipe left over from the Deepwater Horizon rig.

BP placed a "top cap" device with a rubberized seal on top of the pipe to siphon away the oil, a move that some marked as a long-awaited breakthrough in the six-week battle against geologic forces, tapped by man, that now threaten the ecology and livelihood of the Gulf of Mexico.

But judging from recent images from the BP live feed "spill cam," the pipe is still gushing — and hard. And even if BP is capturing 14,800 barrels a day, as Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen said it did on Monday, the increased flow at the wellhead itself could mean the top cap is a wash or may even have worsened the flow.

"That is the big unknown that we're trying to hone in and get the exact numbers on," Allen, President Obama's point man on the spill, told reporters Monday. "And we'll make those numbers known as we get them. We're not trying to lowball it or highball it. It is what it is."

The question of how much oil is leaking has been crucial from Day 1 of the crisis. Since BP is lia-

This image from video provided by BP PLC Tuesday shows dispersant, white plume at center, being applied to the Gulf oil leak.

The Plumes Are Coming

While the oil spill plaguing the Gulf of Mexico is washing ashore with little pattern — slathering some areas in a tarry mess while leaving others unscathed — officials confirmed Tuesday that plumes of oil are also lurking in the deep.

► WHAT WAS FOUND: Test have confirmed underwater plumes dozens of miles from the broken wellhead off Louisiana that's been gushing oil since late April, NOAA Administrator Jane Lubchenco said in Washington.

► WHAT IT MEANS: The presence of underwater plumes carries implications for deep-sea life because tiny microbes eat that up and consume oxygen, choking off the supply to other organisms. The effect could cascade up the food chain, cutting off the food supply of larger predators. (AP)

142 miles

The distance away from the Deepwater Horizon rig that oil has been found by a University of South Florida research vessel. The research team also confirmed oil as far as 3,300 feet below the surface 42 miles northeast of the site, NOAA Administrator Jane Lubchenco said.

ble for every barrel spilled, its estimates have been viewed with skepticism and even ridicule. A NOAA flow-rate group eventually raised the original BP estimate of 5,000 barrels per day, placing it between 12,000 and 19,000 barrels a day. Others have said it's really more, perhaps as much as 30,000 barrels per day.

Considering the questions about earlier estimates and the increased flow from the cut riser pipe, at least one expert — Ira Leifer, a member of the government's Flow Rate Technical Group — believes the current flow could be greater than before. The group had estimated a 20 percent increase in the underwater flow after the cut of the riser pipe.

"The well pipe clearly is fluxing way more than it did before," Leifer told the New York Times. "By way more, I don't mean 20 percent; I mean multiple factors."

BP could incur fines of up to $4,800 per barrel of oil that's escaped. The company says it simply does not know the true extent of the leaking oil.

"How much that [leak] is, we'd all love to know," BP executive Kent Wells told reporters Monday. "It's really difficult to tell." PATRIK JONSSON (CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR)

"I don't sit around just talking to experts because this is a college seminar. We talk to these folks because they potentially have the best answers — so I know whose ass to kick."

Nats Are Suddenly Seeing Stars

Two-straight phenom draft picks brighten the franchise's future

The Nationals

The Washington Nationals are becoming the franchise of phenoms. First, Stephen Strasburg. Now, Bryce Harper. Suddenly, the future looks bright in the nation's capital.

"Other teams are recognizing now that the Nationals aren't just a pushover," said Davey Johnson, in his first year as a special adviser for Washington.

Strasburg's Debut

Stephen Strasburg's first start in the majors ended after Express' deadline Tuesday night. For a pitch-by-pitch recap of his outing versus the Pirates, plus analysis: washingtonpost.com/sports

The Nationals drafted the much-hyped Harper, a 17-year-old slugger with prodigious power from the College of Southern Nevada, with the No. 1 overall pick Monday night. "It's what I've wanted since I was 7 years old," Harper said.

It's a big couple days for the Nationals, who added their stud slugger a day before Strasburg made his major league debut.

"I can't remember where back-to-back years there's two players that have separated themselves from the rest of the field," Nationals General Manager Mike Rizzo said. "In that respect, it is very, very unique. I think it's a lucky time to have two No. 1 picks overall."

Rizzo envisions Harper — primarily a catcher the past few years — as a strong-armed right fielder and a No. 3-type power hitter.

"We're going to take the rigor

Bryce Harper said in a conference call Tuesday that he's OK with ditching the war paint that was his signature look as an amateur.

Scores of Nationals fans arrived early Tuesday to catch Stephen Strasburg's debut.

and the pressures of learning the position, the difficult position of catcher, away from him," Rizzo said, "and really let him concentrate on the offensive part of the game and let his athleticism take over as an outfielder."

Harper is expected to seek a record contract through his adviser, Scott Boras, who negotiated a record-breaking four-year, $15.1 million deal for Strasburg. The Nationals have through Aug. 16 to sign Harper.

A hitter has not garnered this much national attention since J.D. Drew, who went No. 2 overall to Philadelphia in 1997 but didn't sign.

Draft Central

- The Nats were on the clock as baseball's draft resumed on Tuesday. Here's who they took.
- In the second round, Washington took lefty pitcher Sammy Solis from San Diego.
 - The team's third-round draft choice was shortstop Rick Hague from Rice University.
 - The Nats took high school star pitcher A.J. Cole, a first-round talent who fell because he's committed to play for Miami.
 - Texas State shortstop Jason Martison was the fifth-round pick.

Also a Boras client, Drew played in an independent league and signed the following year after he went fifth to St. Louis. Rizzo doesn't have such concerns with Harper. "He's a player that wants to get out and play," Rizzo said. "He's the type of guy that does not enjoy idle time."

Crying Foul Over Ball Complainers

Every four years, we go through the same thing.

No, it's not debating whether the United States will ever fully embrace soccer — the answer is it probably will, but not like football.

No, it's not speculating when the United States will win the World Cup — we're looking at another 20 years or so, at least.

And, no, it's not whether it's healthy for the world's greatest athletes to have sex while in full World Cup mode — an Argentine doctor was the latest to give players the news they wanted to hear.

Instead, there is a heated debate about the official ball of the 2010 World Cup.

Even if the Jabulani stinks, every team is playing with the same disadvantage.

For those who don't know, a new ball is rolled out every four years. And every four years, the players complain about some aspect it.

This year's anger over the Jabulani — yes, the ball even gets a name — is especially noteworthy, with many players saying it moves unpredictably and is difficult to control. U.S. goalkeeper Marcus Hahnemann went as far as to call the ball "a nightmare."

New technology may alter the ball to a certain degree, but even if the Jabulani stinks, every team is playing with the same disadvantage.

A bad bounce can alter any game in any sport. Better a bad bounce than Maradona's infamous "hand of God" handball to win the 1986 World Cup.

Here's my advice: Just kick the damn ball.

BIG CONCERN

Oguchi Onyewu feels ready to face England. The big American defender hasn't played a full 90 minutes since tearing his left patellar tendon during the final World Cup qualifier against Costa Rica. He returned May 25 and played 65 minutes against the Czech Republic, and entered at the start of the second half four days later versus Turkey. He was a 61st-minute sub against Australia. "It was progression," he said Tuesday. "I'm up to facing England." (AP)

NBA Signs off on Leonsis Deal

Caps owner officially takes over Wizards from Pollin family

The Wizards

For the first time in nearly 46 years, someone other than the Pollin family will own the franchise currently known as the Washington Wizards. The NBA Board of Governors on Tuesday unanimously approved the sale of the Washington Wizards to Ted Leonsis' Lincoln Holdings, completing a transition that has been in the works for several months.

"We are pleased that the NBA's Board of Governors has approved Ted Leonsis' purchase of majority ownership of the Wizards from the Pollin family," said NBA Commissioner David Stern. "The transaction signifies the end of an era in the community, and we look forward to him bringing those skills to bear for the Wizards."

John Wall, the former star guard at Kentucky and presumably the soon-to-be No. 1 pick in the NBA draft, is scheduled to work out with the Washington Wizards on June 17, The Washington Post reported. control after Abe Pollin died of a rare brain disease late last year — on May 1 to purchase the remaining 56 percent of the Wizards and Verizon Center that he did not own.

The timing of the move allows Leonsis to have influence over player selection in the June 24 NBA draft and the free agent signing period, which begins on July 1.

Blackhawks veteran Marian Hossa, left, knows it's too soon to be celebrating a title.

Chicago Closes In on Stanley Cup

Blackhawks can win championship with a victory in Philly

Pro Hockey

Marian Hossa knows better than most that no lead is safe in the Stanley Cup finals. The Chicago Blackhawks forward, in the championship round for a third-straight season, finds himself in a familiar situation.

With Detroit a year ago, he was part of a Red Wings team that won the first two games at home, lost the next two in Pittsburgh, prevailed in Game 5 back on home ice for a 3-2 lead and then dropped the final two games as the Penguins captured the Cup.

The Blackhawks have followed that exact path through the first five games against the Philadelphia Flyers. And now they can secure the franchise's first Stanley Cup in 49 years on Wednesday night at the Wachovia Center. "We know it's going to be the toughest game to close it," Hossa said.

The Cup Goes To ...

Looks like America's World Cup misery is going to last another four years, at least according to video game simulation of the tournament from the folks at EA Sports. Their competition — played on the newly released 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa

By Kenneth Terrell

— predicts that Spain will beat Brazil 3-1 in the final to win its first championship.

Electronic Arts does this sort of thing for every major real-world sports tournament for which they make video game, usually with about as much success picking the winner as you have in your office's March Madness pool.

Nevertheless, it does offer a chance to glimpse how close the action on your Xbox is getting to the real thing. This year, Electronic Arts has upgraded its FIFA game — which is always neck-and-neck with Madden Football for the most realistic sports game crown — by factoring in the effect of altitude, and by enabling online gamers to download statistics from the actual tournament into their gameplay and possibly get different winners. So, maybe gamers can help Team USA beat Germany in the elimination round.

Robyn puts out a record of confident, fierce tracks aimed at a wide audience

Album Review

The Swedish singer Robyn is the increasingly rare kind of pop star making smart music for the radio. Like Madonna or Kylie before her, she makes no bones about wanting to reach a wide audience, but her songs display an emotional depth and attention to detail not normally found on the pop charts.

Now 30, Robyn got her start as a '90s teen idol working with producer Max Martin (Britney Spears, the Backstreet Boys) and scoring international hits with tracks such as "Show Me Love." Wanting more artistic control, Robyn broke from that mold not long after to create her own label, Konichiwa Records, and a stunning string of dance-pop singles to go along with it.

Appearing on 2005's "Robyn," tracks such as "Handle Me" and "Be Mine!" found a grown-up, empowered Robyn dealing with heartbreak and loss. Songs took their cues from electronic club sounds, and the throbbing "With Every Heartbeat," a collaboration with techno producer Andreas Kleerup (and, heck, one of the finest pop songs of the past decade) eventually hit No. 1 on the U.K. Singles Chart.

Robyn walks the fine line between mainstream appeal and solid music with grace.

The first installment of a rumored three-album suite to be released this year, "Body Talk Part 1," shows Robyn working with a range of producers and further honing her sound. While "Robyn" dealt mostly with vulnerability, "Body Talk" is about

"It's a never-ending process. I feel this album is more ... not better, because I feel the last album had a distinct voice, too, but more collected, in a way."

— ROBYN, IN AN INTERVIEW WITH MOG.COM ABOUT WHETHER HER POINT OF VIEW COMES ACROSS MORE CLEARLY ON "BODY TALK" THAN IT HAS ON HER PAST ALBUMS.

personal strength, and the singer sounds as fierce and confident as ever. On the driving lead single "Dancing on My Own," she plays the jilted ex "in the corner watching you kiss her," but in the end, she isn't sweating it: "I just came to say goodbye," she sings.

The tongue-in-cheek "Fembot" and spare piano number "Hang With Me" deal with similar themes of empowerment, and sonically the album flits among pulsating electro-pop, Jamaican dancehall and folksy balladry. Arranged by Philly-based DJ and producer Diplo, "Dancehall Queen" is effortlessly buoyant.

At just eight tracks, "Body Talk Pt 1" breezes by almost too quickly but ultimately leaves you wanting more. Depending on how Parts 2 and 3 sound, the record might very well turn out to be the first chapter of a pop classic. JOE COLLY

The Only Cure: More Volume

'Disintegration' can now be yours in a new deluxe edition

Album Review

In the liner notes of the Cure's eighth album, "Disintegration," appears a curious command: "THIS MUSIC HAS BEEN MIXED TO BE PLAYED LOUD SO TURN IT UP."

In 1989, such a demand was puzzling, as the band had become famous for making music that did not sound especially loud or social. Even its catchiest, poppiest songs sounded internalized and downcast, self-reflective and some might say self-absorbed.

Those instructions reappear in the new deluxe edition of "Disintegration." A bonus disc of demos and rarities shows how the songs were created, and a third disc of live tracks (taken from the U.K.-only album "Entreat") shows how they evolved. But the album, remastered in a less monolithic mix, argues that volume is an integral element.

On the album, frontman Robert Smith didn't want merely to express his angst; he wanted to broadcast it.

Upon its release, the intensely gloomy "Disintegration" was predicted to be a commercial failure. Especially following the double-album "Kiss Me Kiss Me Kiss Me" which showed the range of the Cure's sound from forlorn to effervescent, this collection initially sounded too dour for radio play, too claustrophobic to produce a hit. And yet, even 20 years later, "Disintegration" remains the band's commercial pinnacle, not simply outselling its previous and subsequent albums but also notching its two biggest hits, the creepacular "Lullaby" and the smash "Lovesong."

Some thought Smith's angst wouldn't sell, but "Disintegration" proved otherwise.

More than that, it is one of the Cure's best albums. If "Kiss Me" shows its reach, "Disintegration" emphasizes focus and restraint in both lyric and music, setting and sustaining a consistently ominous tone across a dozen tracks. Smith's lyrics, inspired by what sounds like a bad breakup and enhanced by his reintroduction to hallucinogens, tease out a sense of departure and loss, although the album never settles into a simple narrative.

It was also the band's last big hurrah: The Cure notched later hits like "Friday I'm in Love" and "A Letter to Eloise," but subsequent albums failed to capture that same sense of writhing emotional turmoil and inventive soundtrack accompaniment. "Disintegration" was, in other words, the Cure's final loud album, but to its credit, it still demands to be played at top volume. STEPHEN M. DEUSNER

Oprah launches a search for the world's next TV mega-star

Television

Oprah Winfrey wants to give an undiscovered talent a chance to follow in her footsteps on her new cable network.

The talk show host is teaming up with reality TV producer Mark Burnett on a show searching for the next big TV personality. "Your Own Show: Oprah's Search for the Next TV Star" will air on the Oprah Winfrey Network beginning in January, the same month of OWN's launch.

Winfrey is ending "The Oprah Winfrey Show" in September 2011 after 25 seasons.

Burnett said the premise fits perfectly into what people like to watch: Regular people achieving

What would Mark Burnett advise aspiring TV hosts everywhere?

"Try to be authentically yourself. Show energy," he told the AP. "Donald Trump gave me the greatest advice with 'The Apprentice': Find people with the greatest energy source. ... Aspiring hosts can upload videos to Oprah.com under categories such as traditional talk show; cooking; health and wellness; and interior design. It's possible to also watch and vote on submitted videos. In-person casting calls are happening this month in Atlanta, Dallas and Orange County, Calif.

Sheletta Brundidge, a talk radio personality and blogger in St. Paul, Minn., plans to be in Dallas for the open casting, pitching a show about marriage mentors. "People have professional mentors to guide them through their careers, so why not have marriage mentors?" Brundidge said.

The host of "Your Own Show" has yet to be announced.

Where Family Trees Flourish

A Salt Lake City library houses vast genealogy resources

Pursuits

When Jan Gow makes her annual pilgrimage from New Zealand to Salt Lake City, it's not to enjoy Utah's ski resorts, red rock canyons or five national parks. It's for the ribbons of microfilm and endless volumes of maps, cemetery and property records tucked inside the Family History Library.

The library, owned and operated by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints since 1894, is visited by about 700,000 people annually and is widely considered the world's largest repository of genealogy records. It's a favorite destination for "genealogy tourists" — a devoted breed of traveler bent on tracing family trees.

"A woman once asked me to give her four words to explain why she should come to Salt Lake City and not just research it all from home online," said Gow, 70.

"I could think of one: immediacy," Gow said. "When we're here, we can immediately pull out a film, or pull out a book, look at a computer, because it's all here. There's nowhere else, just nowhere else."

The Family History Library's catalog of resources — free for use by church members and nonmembers alike — includes more than 2.2 million rolls of microfilm, 300,000 books and 4,500 periodicals.

These resources make the library a "must visit" destination for anyone who does genealogical work, said Jan Alpert, who heads the board of the 10,000-member National Genealogical Society.

The library markets extensively to historical and genealogy groups.

"We're always featured in the convention and visitors bureau guide," said Curt Witcher, the library's senior manager of special collections. "About 90 percent of our patrons are from out of our county."

And visitors tend to return. "People have fun here, and they are successful," Witcher said.

Middle East Meets Midwest in Michigan

Destinations

With a massive mosque, minarets and scores of Arabic-signed stores and restaurants, parts of this city look like the Middle East.

But Dearborn, Mich., is a lot closer than Beirut or Cairo. And while this Detroit suburb may be better known as the hometown of Ford Motor Co., it's also where the Mideast meets the Midwest.

A third of the city's 100,000 residents trace their roots to the Arab world. Originally, these immigrants came here to work in booming auto factories. Today, they have created corridors of culture and commerce unlike anywhere else.

Warren Avenue is the epicenter of Arabic life in Dearborn. It's grown over the past few decades from a few Arab-owned establishments to a road bustling with Middle Eastern restaurants, markets, boutiques and bakeries.

One of the most prominent and popular is Shatila Food Products, whose Web site boasts of "sweets of the Middle East from the heart of the Midwest." The bakery, founded in 1979, ships its desserts nationwide. Its distinctive, round retail store draws customers from across the state and beyond.

Amal Shatila, the bakery manager and sister of owner Riad Shatila, came from Lebanon in 1989 and joined her brother in the business. "I came, running away from war," she said. "Then I ended up staying for good."

Mom-and-pop shops such as Shatila's are represented at the city's annual Arab International Festival, a three-day event along 14 blocks on Warren Avenue, scheduled for June 18-20 this year.

Visitors can also stop at the Arab American National Museum in Dearborn. It's the first national institution of its kind and documents the collective Arab-American story. JEFF KAROUB (AP)

Volt: Serious About Seafood

‘Top Chef’ finalist Bryan Voltaggio wants to save — and savor — the fishes

Culinary Causes

“Top Chef” fans might know Bryan Voltaggio for his serious demeanor and seriously impressive cooking on the most recent season of Bravo’s hit. But D.C. foodies have been familiar with him for years through his work as the executive chef at Charlie Palmer Steak on the Hill and since 2008, as the chef/owner of Volt, in his native Frederick, Md. Voltaggio, a big booster of local, organic and sustainable foods, participates in the Smithsonian’s Savoring Sustainable Seafood weekend (Residentassociates.com) June 11-13.

KATIE ABERBACH (EXPRESS)

Define sustainable seafood.

It’s not just the obvious — keeping a species in population. It also means farming in ways that don’t impact the environment or other species. Then there’s the human aspect. For example, at Volt, we use Wild Nunavut Arctic Char from Nunavut, Canada. The community there fishes it. It’s a source of income, but some of the catch is used for the community. It’s being responsible about the way fish is caught and the way chefs and consumers impact the lives of the fishermen.

How can I buy fish responsibly?

Understand where it comes from. Ask questions. Grab one of the little “Seafood Watch” wallet cards from Monterey Bay Aquarium (Montereybayaquarium). You can even download a Monterey Bay iPhone app.

What’s your favorite local food?

I cook seasonally, so when things become available, they become my favorite at the time because they

SCOTT SUCHMAN

Frederick’s Bryan Voltaggio may have lost to his brother, Michael, on “Top Chef,” but he hopes to score a win for the fishes.

MARYLAND-STYLE CRAB CAKE

Local Chesapeake crab powers this slightly amped-up version of the Maryland classic.

Ingredients

- ▶ 1 pound crabmeat, picked free of shells
- ▶ 1/3 cup crushed cracker meal
- ▶ 3 spring onions (green and white parts), finely minced
- ▶ 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- ▶ 1 egg
- ▶ 1 tsp salt
- ▶ 3 drops Tabasco sauce
- ▶ 2 tsp Old Bay seasoning
- ▶ 1 tsp Worcestershire sauce
- ▶ 1 tsp dry mustard
- ▶ 2 tsp lemon, juiced
- ▶ 1/4 tsp garlic minced
- ▶ Wondra flour mixed with 1/2 cup extra cracker meal for coating
- ▶ 1 cup canola oil

Makes 4 Servings

In a large bowl, mix together all ingredients except for Wondra flour, extra cracker meal and the canola oil. Using a pastry cutter, mold the crab cakes into desired size, and coat with the mixture of Wondra flour and cracker meal. Heat oil in a large skillet over medium heat. When oil is hot, carefully place crab cakes, in batches, in pan and fry until browned, about four to five minutes. Carefully flip crab cakes and fry on other side until golden brown, about four minutes. Serve warm, with mayonnaise.

BRYAN VOLTAGGIO, VOLT RESTAURANT

taste great. I like things from the [Chesapeake] Bay. I’m all for this huge effort where we’re trying to restock oysters. Peaches do really well in this area mid-July to early August. I’ve been going to Pryor’s Orchard (13841B Pryor Road, Thurmont, Md.; Pryorsorchard.com) for them since I was a kid.

How can I make a great locavore meal?

Cook simply. When you buy local ingredients, they’re at the peak of ripeness. Don’t mask their flavors. Corn, for example, when it’s at the peak of its season, is at the height of sweetness. It doesn’t need to be accented with other ingredients.

It’s been a big year for you. After you were on “Top Chef,” you were nominated for a James Beard Foundation Award for Best Chef in the mid-Atlantic. How often are you still in the kitchen at Volt?

Every day. And, surprisingly, people are shocked when they see me. I’m, like, “Where else would you think

The Scoop

Today’s ‘Top’ Story

Bryan Voltaggio claims his stint on “Top Chef” didn’t influence the menu at Volt (228 N. Market St., Frederick, Md.; 301-696-8658). “I’m not reinventing the wheel when I’m competing like that,” he says. “You basically put forward your best efforts. Maybe I’ve taken a few ideas and tweaked them when I got back to Volt to make them really great dishes, but it’s not changed the menu, really.”

“I’d be right now?” Obviously, I’ve been doing side projects, but if I’m out, then I’m working on something that is going to benefit Volt.

You finished “Top Chef” as runner-up to your brother, Michael, a chef in California. Do you still find yourself competing against him?

I don’t call it competing. We’re constantly pushing each other. In some ways, people might view it as competition, but it’s not. I was nominated for a James Beard award this year. You would think that he would want one, too, so that pushes him to do better.

Has your relationship with Michael changed since “Top Chef”?

We always spent a lot of time discussing where we were going with our careers, but now we’re doing things together that we never considered prior to “Top Chef.” We’ve launched a Web site, Voltaggio-brothers.com.

The next “Top Chef” — season seven — is set in D.C. How do you think D.C. will come across?

It’ll be great. There’s a lot going on in D.C. Over the last five to 10 years, it’s become respected. Even chefs from out of town want to set up shop here, which means a lot.

Horoscope

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You don't have to color in the lines, but rather you can let yourself go a bit and express your eccentricity in some fun ways.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take care that mistakes are small and inconsequential. Anything big is going to take more time than you have to correct.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may have trouble determining just why certain things should be done and others should remain undone. Get opinions from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Confidence is one thing, but do what you can to avoid cockiness and vanity. These can be quite unattractive at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) What you see is not what you're likely to get; appearances can be not only deceiving but also downright dangerous for a while.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You mustn't let your expectations rule your day — or you are sure to be disappointed every step of the way. Be more flexible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) There's no reason you shouldn't share your thoughts and feelings just a bit more openly. Your allies are everywhere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll require some assistance if you want to get a certain thing done on time and under budget. Choose your team-mate carefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Something you've been doing for quite some time is, overall, rather unhealthy for you — and you're likely to realize it. Make changes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The options facing you are quite attractive, but several may be dangerous, too. Do your research; don't be hasty.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be watched — that's a certainty — but how others judge your behavior will depend on the attitude you maintain.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your plans are still tenuous, and you're not yet ready to commit to anything that takes a great deal of time. Don't be in a hurry.
